

Flocculation tank

Flocculation tank is used to mix sludge into colloid come out of suspension in the form of floc. It is usually supplied with flocculating agents, which mainly are ammonium salt, in order to speed up and ease the process by linking the small particles together. Moreover, flocculation tank is generally installed with a transparent cover in a bid to make observing the sludge easily and insulate the harmful gases produced during the process.

