When I first heard that we were going to attend a talk about drugs, I thought it would probably be very boring as we had this kind of talk almost every year. Yet, when we arrived the drug centre, I thought it could be quite interesting. At least, we could choose to watch what we are interested in. Although the part of introducing the drugs is a bit boring, I specifically like the sharing of the girl who was once addicted to drugs. It made me understand deeper about what the addicted people think and how they feel. Overall, I was happy with the life-wide learning day and, although it was unexpected, I really brought something home.
