After having this trip, I realised that we have produced an unbelievable amount of sewage in our daily lives. I really can't imagine what scene that our seas will be if the sewage that we produced every day is poured into the sea without any proper treatment. Actually, purifying the sewage is a very important process in Hong Kong. As we see during the trip, there are many advanced machines to monitor whether the quality of the sewage treated is acceptable. In my view, the most important thing we should do is to reduce the amount of sewage produced daily so as not to add too much pressure towards the sewage treatment works. We have the responsibility to conserve the water resources!
